

Logistics and Distribution Training

Effective logistics and distribution is the key to keeping the gears of your business turning. A logistics team can make or break your company, so it is critical that your company's logistics and distribution process is top-notch, and that it is executed flawlessly. It should be noted though, that they are not one and the same; logistics is primarily concerned with informational flow and planning, while distribution is about physically moving goods and giving out products. Both must be performed at maximum efficiency to guarantee healthy income for your business. This training course is therefore set to help your team members maximise their efficiency in logistic and distribution.
